NEARLY IDENTICAL GAME TO THE MODERN (1944) 'MOUSE, MOUSE, GET OUTTA MY HOUSE'

IN AND OUT THE WINDOW

DIRECTIONS

This game is for two to four players.

The barn should first be set up as shown on the box cover by adjusting the slotted squares into the slits on the inside edges of the barn (the same as setting up an egg crate). For three players, remove one side of the barn.

Each player takes four swallows of a color, together with a round shooter and a piece of felt. Placing the felt on the table within the angle he occupies, he endeavors to snap the swallows through the windows of the barn. This is done by placing the swallows on the felt with the heads toward the windows. By pressing the round shooter on to the tail of the bird and snapping it, the bird will fly easily. It may require a little practice to get the birds to fly through the windows.

When four play the game each player will be within a right-angle triangle formed by the walls of the barn. If three play, two players will be within a triangle and one against a straight side. For two players, each player will have two right angles to cover.

The object of the game is for each player to dispose of his own swallows and any which opponents shoot into his space. When he has no swallows left, he wins the game. He should announce this by shouting "Out."

RULES

If a player shoots a swallow through the window and it falls to the floor, that swallow is out of the game. However, should a swallow be shot to the floor without first flying through a window, the player who made the shot must run and pick it up and add it to his swallows to be disposed of.

There are no turns in this game, but at a given signal everybody starts shooting and continues as fast as he can until one player wins.
