PUZZLE LOTTO

DIRECTIONS

An amusing pastime played on the same principle as Lotto.

Two to six may play, dividing the cards evenly among the players and discarding any extra cards.

All the counters are put in a heap, face down, and one of the players is selected as the "caller." The caller takes from the heap one counter at a time and calls out the number shown thereon. The players see if this number appears on the card or cards before them. Whoever has the number on his card gets the counter, which is laid over the corresponding number on the card. In this way the picture on the card is developed.

In case there are four or five players and any cards are not used, when these numbers are called they are merely put aside and only the cards used by the players are counted for the game.

Whoever completes a picture first wins the game. The others may continue to play until all pictures are completed, or a new game may be started.
