

Best Household Game of the Age.

AGCA
ARCHIVES

VERBA.

1.00
2

The Game of Verba is the most interesting entertainment of the nineteenth century. Adapted to young and old of both sexes. This fascinating and unique source of pleasure, instruction and wonder can be enjoyed by any number of persons at once, and is absolutely unobjectionable in every particular.

Children are delighted with it, and never care for cards if allowed to play Verba.

We have known children to sit down to play it early in the evening, while the parents were engaged with reading. In about five minutes the father's paper was put aside, and he proceeded to watch the children, joining them when the first game was finished.

By this time the mother puts down her book and began to inspect the progress of affairs, looking over her husband's shoulder. The children were beating him, being more expert than he, and concluding (aloud) she could do better than that herself, she joined the players at the beginning of the third game, and the fun lasted until bed-time.

We have known college professors to grow so interested in the game of Verba that they sat up until midnight playing it.

Sent postpaid (with four handsome picture cards), printed in 12 colors and a package of other interesting printed matter) on receipt of ten cents in stamps.

Send for our Magic Circle Puzzle. It is new, curious and intricate enough to puzzle any one,—a most interesting study. 2 cents each; ten copies, with ten picture cards in colors, 10 cents.

MACK PUBLISHING CO.,

528 & 530 Washington Street,

