

of the Old Testament the quotation is to be found.

---

This game is endorsed by all the leading colleges of all denominations, and from a literary point of view it cannot be surpassed, as the Bible of course is acknowledged to be the gem of literature.

Many young men have failed in their examinations for various colleges by not knowing where some of these well-known quotations came from, many thinking they are to be found in Shakespeare's works.

Directions for Playing
THE
OLD TESTAMENT GAME
OF
P R O V E R B S

---

Published by

PARKER BROTHERS, Incorporated

SALEM, MASS.

NEW YORK

LONDON

AGCA
ARCHIVES

1902

THE OLD TESTAMENT GAME OF PROVERBS

---

Separate the cards into two parts, having all the cards of one color in one pack, and the other color in another pack, and dealing them ALL, one at a time, to each of the players. This is so each player will have an equal number of cards of each color.

The player on the dealer's left begins by reading the quotation on any card containing a number only without the letter "A," not mentioning the number thereon.

The next player in turn endeavors to complete the remainder of the quotation, and if so doing gets both the cards. If this player is unable to do so the turn passes to the next, and so on.

If no one knows the remainder of the quotation the dealer will call the number of the card read, and the player having the card with the same number with an "A" reads the quotation and gets the two cards. The player obtaining the largest number of cards at the end of the game WINS.

This game can be made more difficult by the players being required to tell in what book