

ever knew when the officer was seen crawling down the aisle, Tige spied him, as——the officer jumped into the ring Tige jump into the officer, then began a performance such as was never seen in a circus before, the Ringmaster, the clown, the pet bear, Buster, Tige and the officer were all mixed up in a rough and tumble scrap, while the audience howled with delight. Mrs. Brown sprang into the ring when——she seized Buster and draged him out of the circus and led him home none the worse for the good time he had had at the circus.

Published by SELCHOW & RIGHTER,
New York.

BUSTER BROWN.

AT THE CIRCUS.

PLACE the cards in the centre of the table, face down ; a player must be selected to read aloud from the book. and at the first——, the player on his left must select a card from the pack, and read it aloud to finish the sentence ; at the next——, the next player must select the card and so on.

—————BOOK—————

Mrs. Brown, with Buster, arrived safely in New York, and at once proceeded to the circus, as she entered the tent——. in another minute——proceeding further——. Mrs. Brown laughed and——, meeting a lady friend, Mrs. Brown stood talking while——as they walked on——. This surprised the ladies and as they turned around——, calling to Buster to hurry along they proceeded to the menagerie—and—. By this time a police officer had his eye on Buster and as he watched—the officer stole up behind, them—the officer was about to grab him when—. The officer took Buster by the arm and as he led him along— A crowd now gathered and—the people cheered them—, they were all delighted when—. Mrs. Brown had missed Buster and as she searched for him—turning around she was shocked when—after which—.

The officer told Mrs. Brown that Buster must leave the circus or else behave himself and keep quiet, Buster promised to do so. Mrs. Brown, was pleased, she sat down to rest when—and—. Oh! Buster, cried his mother you promised to be a good boy, so I am he replied and then—after which—and dodging around some people—then quickly—this kicked up quite a commotion and just as the police officer again appeared—. Now, you come with me, said the officer, but Buster was too quick for him he ran out of sight in a minute then—and buying some peanuts—.

Buster continued on enjoying himself very much meanwhile the officer and his mother were looking for him everywhere.

Just as—the officer came in sight and as he made sure to catch him this time—then the officer hid behind a large cage of snakes and—. Now Tige was getting tired, he sat down to rest and spied the officer hiding and watching Buster, so he watched the officer, as—the officer darted out so did Tige—. The officer grabbed buster, Tige grabbed the officer, then the officer let go, so did Tige and ran with the officer after him, while Buster went on his way rejoicing.

Buster, then boldly entered the circus ring. As the people clapped—then—the people greatly enjoyed this and as they laughed and cheered— Buster and Tige were having the greatest time they