

Game of Politics.

DIRECTIONS.

Shuffle the cards, and deal them equally to each player. The players must gather up their cards without looking at them, and place them on the table, face down; then the player on the left of the dealer must turn over his top card, the next player must also turn over his top card: if they match, the pair is placed in the centre of the table, if not, then the first player must shuffle all his cards, including the one he turned, and place them as before: the third player must then turn a card to see if he can match the second player, and so continue, as already described. The player who turns the last card, and matches the last pair, wins the game.
