

THE GAME OF THE STATES,

On which the Coat of Arms of each State is represented;

ALSO,

THE GAME OF "WHO'LL BE PRESIDENT?"

DIRECTIONS FOR THE GAME OF THE STATES

NOTE.—On each card is the name of a State, the number of its electoral votes, its population, and several geographical questions.

1. This game may be played by as many as can conveniently sit around a table,—not less than three or four being desirable.

2. Each player draws a card from the pack, and the one who draws the highest electoral vote, (which is given at top under the name of the State,) commences the game, by distributing the cards to the several players.

3. The player at the right hand of the distributor begins by calling upon his right-hand neighbor for a particular State. If the one called upon has the State among his cards, he will ask the caller the numbered questions at the bottom of the card. If four of the questions are correctly answered, the card must be given up, and the winner may call for another, and so continue to do, until he shall call for one not in the hand of his neighbor, or shall fail to answer the questions. When either of these shall happen, it becomes the turn of the next player, to the right, to proceed in the same way.

4. If the number of players be four or five, the one who shall succeed in getting possession of fifteen cards may be considered the winner.

If the number of players is only two, the winner should be required to obtain twenty-one. The number, however, may be varied, and fixed upon at the commencement of each game.

NOTE.—The Key below contains answers to all the numbered questions. This can be referred to when any doubt exists as to the correctness of the answer given.

"WHO'LL BE PRESIDENT?"

In playing this game, regard is had only to the population and the number of electoral votes. This game may be commenced and conducted in the same manner as the "Game of the States." The player at the right of the distributor calls upon his right-hand neighbor for a particular card, (naming the State;) and if the one called upon has it, he will ask the caller what its population is, and the number of its electoral votes. If these are correctly answered, the caller takes the card and calls for another; and so on, until he calls for one not in the hand of the player at his right, or fails to answer the questions. The whole number of electoral votes is 275, and the player who shall first obtain 138, wins the game.
